The agent said I would have to have internet banking and internet access to my account in order to clear this error, which meant internet access was a problem for me. My internet service was, at the time, a HughesNet satellite Internet service. I asked for a refund for my services, which was given. Finally, I asked the agent to stop calling me. Over a year later, the bank contacted me to tell me that it had closed my account. This was later confirmed by the executive vice president of my branch.
