More poetry from Barack Obama. Pt 1. Day To Be High. A solemn stillness... Like an amber contentment over a living land. Day To Be High.A blend of sun, heat, sweet, slow. A summer-like peace,A holy slowness of contentment. I can barely see today,A live possibility of warmth.Not fit to see, hot and honest. This is not the summer-like peace of fall,And it's not truly a day to be high. This day...Lies dead

in cold stones of knowledge of one's beat. Contempt is my full song, And it must come off like rocks of poetry. No glory, no nothing, We're all brought down to our last performance, whether it's a signature that's stamped into cold ashes... or a page of what we think is our great American literature. Flash in my eyes. "No Slaves!" "We'll Do This Our Own Way!" The laughter lights up my spirit and I feel heated from all the books/America/the sea/winter... although Summer is supposed to be our season... yet the groundmold around my soul this morn. The smell of trees turgescting through the air, The taste of fresh foreign cakes, Cream & sugar: soild, liquid, sweet... A day that is live, a day that is sum; A world in which to celebrate, to be free. What a day... What a day. The sunlight is like the majority of Obama's predecessors: those who stand for freedom. The spirit of our dead heroes of good folks, the difficulty of this nation, the joy of the American experience. Alone and Sovereign But with silver chains of sunlight coming in Through my window from afar I saw the beautiful life Handsome and graceful blowing abroad The leaves of Autumn on the trees all It thought to me of that Great Freedom We Govern Now. I Dreamt of Liberty Beloved Ones. Amongst Great Nations Which Settled the wilderness, Lawns of green grass where the sons of Abraham Rose and settled their laws of friendship upon each other. And the Far-off Continent Came to our own senses, Distinct spatially as the Far-off East... They felt viscerally the air of northern winds, These Northern Peoples. And Beloved Ones... This nation's circuit was Living Criminality and all the old-world fierceness. But they dared. They Dared Great Leaders...

Diabetes and reproductive hormones: data from a cohort of men at varying levels of risk. The data on obesity, cigarette smoking, alcohol consumption, and menstrual characteristics of the menstrual cycle (frequency of cycle, periovulatory phase, and duration of the periovulatory phase) on glucose tolerance status of 110 prepubertal men in a cohort at different levels of obesity risk were analyzed. Glucose tolerance was estimated according to the WHO classification, and independent risk factors such as age, race, obesity, and cigarette smoking for impaired glucose tolerance and insulin resistance were identified. To assess the effect of reproductive hormonal factors on glucose metabolism, a Wilcoxon rank sum test was used with a Bonferroni adjustment. Men with intrinsic factors compromising their ability to secrete adequate amounts of insulin (insulin resistance) tended to have higher fasting and 2-hr blood glucose levels. The results from this preliminary analysis support the hypothesis that insulin resistance may alter the effects of obesity, cigarette smoking, alcohol intake, and reproductive events on glucose tolerance status.]} : \ [Let  $\mathbf{R}_{\ell}:=y_i, \forall i \in [k]$ . ]{} 1 : [\*\*Make a decision:\*\*]{} \ [Decide  $\sigma(\cdot, \mathbf{S}_a, \mathbf{R}_{\ell})$ . ]{} Given a forest  $\mathcal{F}$  with  $k$  trees, it is possible to project
