Because all information is rasterized, today's Photoshop can replace traditional film-based images. The colors of an original digital photograph often go beyond what's technically available in the film. Because film is inherently limited to less colors than are available in digital photography, today's Photoshop is not only capable of handling these digital colors, but it is also much more versatile and powerful than traditional film-based photography. One of Photoshop's best features for beginners is the ability to lock and unlock layers so that each edits to the pixels in the layers is possible, even if different parts of the image are locked out. Because you can still edit the pixels in a locked layer, you can mix the layers into any order, which may be necessary to create photo composites. Other features of Photoshop that help beginners include the ability to apply filters to an image, such as sepia, multiply, soft-light, and many others. Because Photoshop's interface is so consistent and easy to use, not only can you learn to use the application quickly, but you can create images without a lot of frustration. After you learn the basic use of Photoshop, you won't be able to live without it. Photoshop and other programs for image management Image management programs are useful for a variety of reasons. They can help you organize the images you take, create a portfolio, and export the images to a variety of other formats. You can create images and web pages that will act as a portfolio for the images you create, and you may use the image management program to create a small version of an existing portfolio, share images on social networking sites, or send them via e-mail. The main program used for image management on the Mac is iPhoto (`www.apple.com/ilife/photosynth/iphotoshop.html`), which is great for taking pictures and creating projects with images. IPhoto is covered in Chapter 3. iPhoto has a number of other features besides image editing, such as managing your contact list and keeping track of your calendar. It also has powerful photo- and video-editing features, although I'm not going to cover those here. For Mac users, the industry standard program for sharing, exporting, and editing images is Photoshop (`www.adobe.com/products/photoshop`). Photoshop has a number of other features besides image editing, such as creating web pages, web site design, and animation, which are all covered in this chapter

Non-canonical functions of GR co-activator p65. Transcriptional co-activators GR (NR3C1) and p65 (RelA) form a GR-p65 complex, which activates gene transcription by binding to GAGA motifs in DNA. GR-mediated gene activation has been well studied, but the functions of the GR-p65 complex remain poorly understood. We tested the ability of p65 to stimulate GR-mediated luciferase reporter gene expression. Here we show that the strong GR transactivator RU486 does not stimulate basal and GR-p65-induced transcription. Moreover, GR-dependent transcription does not increase in cells with nonfunctional p65, indicating that p65 directly or indirectly stimulates GR transcriptional activity.Attenuated heart rate recovery as a cardiovascular predictor in hypertensive patients: usefulness of an integrative analysis of autonomic function. The aim of this study was to compare the ability of heart rate recovery (HRR) and HRR-BP slope to predict cardiovascular events in a hypertensive population. A total of 434 hypertensive patients were analysed. The patients were followed up for a median (Q1; Q3) of 29.4 months (20.6; 48.2) for the occurrence of the first event, vascular (stroke, myocardial infarction) or coronary (myocardial infarction or unstable angina). Cardiovascular events were noted in 168 patients. The two-predictor model with HRR and HRR-BP slope detected all of the events, with a sensitivity of 81% and a specificity of 53% (area under the ROC curve (AUC) = 0.632). A three-predictor model that included the HRR values obtained at different time-points of the recovery curve and the diastolic blood pressure at the time of a negative heart rate-systolic blood pressure product (HRR-BP Slope), increased the number of events detected (143/168; AUC = 0.714, p = 0.016), achieving 85% sensitivity and 75% specificity. The HRR-BP Slope was able to detect all of the events in patients who had a HRR of less than 11 s (AUC = 0.821, p = 0.006). Attenuated HRR is not only useful as a surrogate marker of cardiovascular risk in hypertensive patients, but it can also be used as an integrative
